Resourcing Employment Social Enterprises Together

Purpose

Resourcing Employment Social Enterprises Together (RESET) is a coalition advocating for capital, resources, and policy change to support employment social enterprises across the U.S.

Background

RESET is primarily composed of employment social enterprises (ESEs): evidence-based businesses with a social mission to provide jobs, income, and training to individuals overcoming high barriers to employment. Through paying jobs and supportive services—like financial literacy, housing, and counseling—ESEs help employees stabilize their lives, build skills, and develop a work history. When participants have the necessary tools and support to succeed, ESEs help their employees find, and keep, good jobs in the competitive market.

Evidence shows us that ESEs effectively and efficiently promote economic, racial, and social equity. According to a study conducted by Mathematica Policy Research, ESEs offer a 123% return on investment ($2.23 benefit for every dollar invested) for taxpayers, government, philanthropy, and the people they serve. The ESEs in this study employed individuals with the following profile: 25% had never been employed, 70% had been convicted of a crime, and 85% had experienced housing instability. In alignment with the evidence-based model, numerous coalition members—including Center for Employment Opportunities, Per Scholas, Roca, and Year Up—consistently demonstrate their impact through rigorous experimental or quasi-experimental evaluations.

Challenge

ESEs can play a central role in ensuring an equitable economic recovery. However, because ESEs are often hybrids of business and social service organizations, and incorporated as nonprofits and for profits, it can be challenging for government programs to include or underwrite them.

Solution

ESEs are engines of economic growth and mobility - they offer paid job training that prevents and ends homelessness and reduces recidivism. ESE closures would eliminate community assets that play a critical role in economic recovery by rapidly offering productive employment and immediate income when people need it most. They also promote equity and help address structural inequities by connecting individuals overcoming high barriers to employment to quality jobs that can lead to long-term employment and compensation. ESEs must be included in economic stimulus and recovery packages so that they can continue serving the populations who are especially vulnerable to today's dual health and economic crises.
